Prepared for USA Hometown Experts on November 4, 2026

Two of your brands give two different answers to the same 2 a.m. question.

We read Metro Plumbing, Heating & Air and Dixie Electric, Plumbing & Air the way a homeowner would at night: website, listings, reviews. Everything below links to where we saw it. Three fixes cost nothing and you can make them this week.

USA Hometown Experts runs eight local brands. We couldn't read the parent company's website, so this covers two of them: Metro (Chattanooga, TN) and Dixie (Montgomery, AL and nearby markets). Source

The short version

- Metro's website promises 24/7 emergency service. Its HomeAdvisor profile says it offers no emergency service.
- Dixie's website lists office hours ending at 5 or 6 p.m. A listing citing its Google profile says “Open 24 hours.”
- Reviews praise your speed, with one recent “I never heard back.”

Three fixes you can make this week, free

No software, no budget, no need to talk to us. Tick them off as you go; this page remembers.

- [ ] 1 Correct Metro's HomeAdvisor profile.

  Its emergency answer contradicts the website. Whichever is current, a homeowner should read the same answer in both places.

- [ ] 2 Line up Dixie's hours.

  Compare the Google Business Profile with the website, and say plainly what happens after 5 p.m. and on weekends, including how to reach someone for an urgent job.

- [ ] 3 Show one phone number on Metro's contact page.

  If the second number is for call tracking, the customer only needs one. While you're there, click through “Book Online” to confirm it opens the scheduler.

Metro Plumbing, Heating & Air
replies instantly

Hi, our furnace quit and the house is getting cold. Is anyone there this late?

Yes, I can help. Do you smell gas, or is anyone at risk from the cold right now?

No gas smell. We do have a toddler, though.

Thanks for telling me. What's the address, and is this the best number for the technician?

We're in Hixson, and this number works.

I've sent this to the on-call technician and flagged the toddler. You'll get a text once they confirm a time.

What if I start smelling gas while we wait?

Leave the house and call 911 and your gas utility from outside. I've added this to your notes for the technician.

What a 9 p.m. call could sound like

Illustrative only, using Metro's advertised emergency service. A real version follows your rules for dispatch, safety and pricing.

If you want it built

One after-hours desk for all eight brands

An agent on phone, text and web forms that answers in each brand's name, triages emergencies with your safety script, and hands the on-call tech a complete job, not a voicemail.

Timeline

First brand live in about two weeks, the rest brand by brand.

Investment

$15–50k. One-time setup, retainer from $3.5k / month. Part of the fee can be tied to a number we agree on.

Or just use the three fixes. They're yours either way.

How we made this

Researched with NEXTWISE's own AI agents, the same kind we build for clients, then checked line by line and sent by Darius Arvinte, our founder. Only public information, as of November 4, 2026.

What we read

- Metro and Dixie websites (home and contact pages)
- HomeAdvisor and BBB profiles
- Public reviews on BBB, Customer Lobby and MapQuest
- A directory listing citing Google Business Profile data

What we didn't do

- We didn't call or submit any form, so we can't say how after-hours contacts are handled in practice.
- We didn't review the other six brands.
